The Child That Books Built: A Life in Reading - Francis ...

Because THE CHILD THAT BOOKS BUILT: A LIFE IN READING is a rather odd and uneven mix of the personal and the scholarly, with the emphasis on the latter. Indeed I nearly put the book aside after nearly sixty pages that seemed to deal more with Piaget, Bettelheim, Freud and Spock, and their theories and comments on early childhood development and language acquisition, than it did with kids' books.

The Child That Books Built: A Life in Reading: Spufford ...

Weaving together child development, personal reflection, and social observation, Spufford shows the force of fiction in shaping a child: how stories allow for escape from pain and for mastery of the world, how they shift our boundaries of the sayable, how they stretch the chambers of our imagination. Fired by humanity, curiosity, and humor, The Child That Books Built confirms Spufford as a ...

Review: "The Child that Books Built" by Francis Spufford ...

The Child That Books Built offers a bit of child-psychology, from Bettelheim to Piaget, and a good deal of story-telling theory. More fun are the author's own experiences: from learning to read to moving from C.S.Lewis (when he is eleven or twelve the Chronicles of Narnia "were the Platonic Book of which other books were more or less imperfect shadows") to Laura Ingalls Wilder to Ian Fleming.
